All about this bottle

Introducing Samuel Gelston's Single Pot Still Irish Whiskey - a captivating fusion of tradition and innovation, meticulously crafted through a unique partnership between two esteemed families. Collaborating across continents, cousins Johnny Neill and renowned actor Sam Neill bring their collective heritage to life, blending the timeless allure of Ireland's pot still whiskey with the refined elegance of New Zealand's Two Padlocks Pinot Noir. This exceptional spirit begins its journey as a traditional triple-distilled single pot still whiskey, aged for 22 months in American bourbon barrels. Then, it undergoes a remarkable transformation, maturing within French oak casks that once cradled Sam Neill's acclaimed Two Padlocks Pinot Noir. After a period ranging from 21 to 27 months, the whiskey emerges, boasting a rich bronze hue and enticing aroma. On the nose, discover a delightful symphony of malty notes intertwining with subtle hints of strawberry, nutmeg, and exotic tropical fruits. As you savor each sip, indulge in the big, rich, and sweet palate, balanced with just enough dryness to tantalize your taste buds. Notes of blackcurrant and a touch of spice add depth and complexity to every pour.
